Smith et al recently studied 43 men (15—25 years) with acne who were given instructions to follow a high carbohydrate diet similar to their current diet (control group) compared to a group given instructions to follow a low glycemic load diet for 12 weeks.[15] There was a significant decrease in the number of acne lesions following diet modification in the low glycemic load group compared to the control group.[15] The low glycemic load group also noted weight loss, reduced free androgen index and dehydroepiandrosterone sulfate (DHEAS), and increased insulin-like growth factor binding protein-1 (IGFBP-1), which is known to be inversely correlated with insulin and free IGF-1 levels.[15—17] Another prospective cohort study of 49 university students (men and women) were also evaluated with respect to their diets, presence of acne, and specific laboratory values
