Instead of emphasizing the social divide between our political parties, we as Americans should call on our leaders to find the common ground that will improve our health and our country. The solution to our problem is found in a combination of abstinence plus comprehensive sex education, increased access to birth control, and smart investments in healthcare. If Texas, North Carolina, and other states across the nation actually want to end abortion, then instead of targeting women they need to set their sights on creating comprehensive sex education and lowering barriers to accessing birth control. Both parties claim that they are looking out for women; well, it is time that they all live up to their promises and work together to improve the lives of women and families everywhere.
